Strict Supervision of Trailer Parks in Dixon Is Established

Council Acts Ahead of Influx of Workers at Defense Plant

Any effort to establish trailer camps within the city limits to house defense plant workers this spring, will find promoters of such parks faced with stringent regulations, carefully planned to protect the public morals, health and welfare of the community through the foresight of the members of the Dixon city commission. The longest ordinance to be enacted by the council since the adoption of the zoning measure, was passed last evening, providing stringent control of trailer parks and the parking of trailers within the city limits. Being an emergency measure directed to protect the health and sanitation of the city, the ordinance becomes effective upon publication, and is to be rigidly enforced.

City Attorney Gerald Jones has spent some time on the draft of the measure, which is in part patterned on an outline submitted by the federal government. Briefly, the ordinance provides the following regulations:

Some Regulations
A permit is required for the privilege to park a trailer coach on any property in Dixon at the rate of $2 per fiscal year. Upon application for such permit, the applicant must file a statement setting forth the sanitary conditions and sewage accommodations.

To operate a trailer park within the city, it is necessary for the operator to file an application with the commissioner of public health and safety. The permit fee has been established at $200 for a 20 trailer park and $10 for each additional coach above 20. The premises at all times are to be subject to inspection by officers of the city health department.

A responsible attendant is to be on duty at the trailer park at all times to supervise the camp and to enforce the provisions of the ordinance. Within the park area surfaced roads at least 16 feet in width are required and all walks are to be surfaced, the entire premises to be adequately lighted at night. Playground areas for children are also required in the parks. No trailer parks will be permitted within the city's established fire zone area, and to establish a park, the owner or operator must first secure the permission of owners of adjoining property within at least 200 feet from the proposed park.

Must Provide Hot Water
Hot water is to be available to the occupants of the trailers throughout the entire year and the drinking water supply, if from a private source or well, is subject to analysis every 60 days. Strict regulations for rest rooms are provided, with departments for each sex. The same rule applies to the bath house and laundry facilities are to be provided in a separate building. Depositories, meeting certain provisions, are to be provided for rubbish and garbage.

A register of all guests at the park is to be kept and subject to inspection at any time. The building of additions or lean-to's to trailers and the removal of wheels and building of foundations beneath trailers is forbidden. Members of the city department of health are empowered to make the inspections of the camps and violations of the ordinance are punishable by fines of not less than $10 and costs or a maximum of $200 and costs.

The War Today!

(This daily feature, conducted by Dewitt MacKenzie, Wide World war analyst, is written today by Fred Vanderschmidt.)

(Telegraph Special Service)
The German high command dusts off the old, warped photograph record about "encirclement and annihilation" on the Russian front today and claims the slaughter of 27,000 Russians and imprisonment of 5,000 in four weeks on the central sector.

It has very good reasons of its own for this pre-spring offensive by communiqué:

1. It is time for Adolf Hitler to pretend to make good on his promises, made in his speech of January 30, that good news for Germans might be expected from the east in a few weeks.

2. It is probable that the Russian command will announce by tomorrow or Monday the accumulated results of the last few weeks of winter counter-offensive, and since there is every reason to believe these gains have been extensive, the Germans want to take the edge off them.

German "military circles," which designation is a device used by the nazis to accredit information which the high command does not want to stand officially behind, say this action took place "near Rzhev."

This probably is an excellent tip that the Russians will announce capture of that city, on the upper Volga 125 miles northwest of Moscow, which they long ago bypassed. They probably also will announce and document gains far west of Rzhev, close to the frontiers of the nazi-occupied and typhus-ridden Baltic states, plus an important penetration of the south.

This expected Russian communiqué may well be the last compilation of large-scale offensive action before the Red army is obliged to cope with Hitler's real spring drive.

In recent days some skepticism has been expressed about Hitler's

Chicago, Feb. 21.—(AP)—J. A. Beauparant is going to observe George Washington's birthday anniversary tomorrow by lighting a candle—but his is no ordinary candle.

Made of solid wax, it measures 18 feet, 3 inches high; 26 inches in diameter at the base, 16 inches across the top, and weighs 2,205 pounds. Beauparant said he calls it his Victory Candle and he plans to light it on every holiday until the war is over. It stands in the back yard of his home—on Washington Boulevard.

Production as Usual Is Holiday Theme in Nation's Arms Factories

New York, Feb. 21.—(Wide World)—"But those boys can't stop planes and tanks with their bare hands."

That was the way War Production Chief Donald M. Nelson described the urgent need of the armed services for weapons this week as he ordered arms manufacturers to keep production whistling along next Monday, eliminating the traditional Washington's birthday holiday.

Check-up indicated most major war plants, including steel, airplane, tank, ship, gun and ammunition makers would be operating at full blast.

The quick fall of Singapore, although anticipated in some business circles, cast a gloom over the financial community throughout the week. Like Pearl Harbor, the

McDaniel Writes of Harrowing Flight to Safety in Batavia

Correspondent's Tale of Last Days on Singapore Is Received

By C. YATES MCDANIEL

Batavia, N. E. I., Feb. 20.—(Delayed)—(AP)—I escaped from doomed Singapore Feb. 13 aboard the last vessel to leave the battered and burning fortress and reached Batavia during an air raid alarm this morning.

In my seven and one-half day journey I abandoned a bombed ship, was cast up on an uninhabited island, made my way through a storm in a small launch to Sumatra, crossed that island's mountain wilds by truck, rail, pony cart and completed 1,200 round-about miles safely through the Indian ocean aboard a destroyer.

From the salt water soaked pulp which is all that is left of my journal, I will attempt to piece together my story, which in a larger sense is the story of the last days of Singapore—of the few who succeeded and many more who failed to escape the deadly and efficient fury of the final Japanese onslaught on Britain's last stronghold in southern Asia.

Early in the morning we were looking at the peaceful scene of the little islands when two Japanese light bombers circled and glided toward us. The old ship

Winning War Our Only Task; Green

Chicago, Feb. 21.—(AP)—There is only one job in America, Gov. Dwight H. Green said today, the job of winning the war as quickly and decisively as the arms of the nation can strike.

"But total war is not a war of battlefronts alone," he continued in an address prepared for delivery before the Chicago chapter of the D. A. R. "Those who remain behind have a job to do which is just as vital and as imperative as the war of national effort, in which the armed forces are a projection of the spirit of the people behind them x x x."

The governor said that as the fight goes on the American people may receive bad news. "If we do," he urged, "let us take the fullest courage from the years of ordeal through which Washington passed."

"America is united today as never before x x x unity will make us impregnable against those who hate us."

Hitler's Plans For Spring Offensive in Russia Challenged

Red Star Says Russian Army Fighting to Put End to Nazi Germany

Moscow, Feb. 21.—(AP)—Adolf Hitler's plans for a spring drive were challenged by the army newspaper Red Star today with the declaration, "we shall yet advance far westward before spring and when it comes we shall develop our offensive on a still larger scale."

Conceding that a "stubborn, sanguinary struggle is ahead" Red Star reiterated that the Russians are fighting to "put an end to nazi Germany in 1942."

The Moscow radio reported fierce fighting, with tremendous German losses, on a southwestern sector "where units under command of Kozlov and Minotnov are operating."

"Our troops occupied the inhabited locality of 'M' and killed 400 enemy officers and men," the radio said.

On Leningrad Front
The Leningrad radio said soviet forces had penetrated the first and second German lines before that second city of Russia and that German counterattacks were unsuccessful.

Captured medical reports were quoted by the soviet information bureau as saying soldiers of the 339th German infantry regiment were extremely exhausted and the implication was that cold and illness had handicapped other invasion units.

Reporting continued operations against the Germans overnight, the bureau said soviet forces on the Leningrad front had destroyed 49 German blockhouses, 50 bridges and dugouts and many German gun positions and killed 1,200 men during the past few days.

NAZIS CLAIM SUCCESS

(By The Associated Press)
Adolf Hitler's high command asserted today that German tank forces had killed 27,000 Russians and captured 5,000 prisoners in a four-week battle of encirclement near Rzhev, key nazi invasion base 125 miles northeast of Moscow, while the London radio reported that fresh soviet troops had landed in the Crimea.

Russian front-line dispatches had previously declared that the German hold-out garrison at Rzhev, guarding the north flank of the nazi retreat from Moscow, had been surrounded.

In the Crimea, a BBC broadcast said Russian troops were advancing upon the port of Feodosiya, at the neck of the Kerch peninsula. Soviet warplanes aiding in the defense of Sevastopol, Crimean naval base, were declared to have killed nearly 30,000 Germans in a series of 300 offensive thrusts.

Fight in Sub-Zero Cold
On the Moscow front, Hitler's headquarters said German troops, fighting in bitter sub-zero cold, had "destroyed the bulk of an enemy army and beaten a large part of a further enemy army"—presumably in the Rzhev sector.

The claim of total dead and wounded would represent about two divisions, or half of one Russian army corps.

In the North African front, British headquarters reported that German troops and armored forces retreated to the north after a clash with British patrols on the Tmimi-el Mechili line west of Tobruk.

Bad weather hampered operations on both sides.

Premier Mussolini's high command said Italian troops counter-attacked and repulsed attacks by British motorized columns below Tmimi, 60 miles west of Tobruk.

Governor's Daughter Lays a Cornerstone

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 21.—(AP)—If Governor Green ever wants to delegate the task of cornerstone-laying, he has a conscientious proxy in his own family—his daughter, Gloria, 11.

Gloria watched workmen constructing a shelter for the governor's police guards near the front door of the executive mansion yesterday and learned from the masons that the cornerstone detail had been overlooked. She obtained a trowel and dedicated one of the bricks, sealing a dime in the mortar as a ceremonial token.

Her older sister, Nancy, 15, discounted the proceedings as unnecessary. "Anyway," she pointed out, "it wasn't Gloria's dime."

National House to Tackle Matters of Major Importance

Washington, Feb. 21.—(AP)—New war powers legislation heads a list of major measures to be taken up by the house next week.

Slated for consideration Tuesday, it is one of five important matters house leaders hope to dispose of during the week.

Others are legislation to repeal pensions for congressmen, to set up a war damage insurance program, to create a women's auxiliary corps to aid the military, and to extend the life of the special committee investigating un-American activities.

The rules committee has set aside four hours for debate on the war powers bill, which would give 15 extraordinary grants of authority to federal agencies for the duration. The most controversial clause in the senate-approved proposal would let Federal Reserve banks purchase government obligations direct from the treasury instead of on the open market as now required. Opponents contend this authorization would permit too much leeway for government bond market manipulation.

See Repeal Victory
Also in controversy is a provision giving defense agencies broad powers to inspect books and accounts of contractors and to require them to be brought to Washington if necessary.

Leaders said the house margin for the repeal on the pension bill might exceed the 75 to 5 vote in the senate Thursday.

While the house will be in session Monday—primarily to hear someone read Washington's farewell address—no legislation of consequence is scheduled for consideration that day.

Little difficulty is expected by Chairman Dies (D-Tex.) in obtaining approval for continuing until next January the life of his committee on un-American activities. Unless continued by the house, the committee will cease to function after next month.

Virtually no unified opposition has developed to the women's auxiliary corps bill, which has been endorsed by the war department.

Lack of Shipping Holds Up Needed Material for Fighting Men

Washington, Feb. 21.—(AP)—The war department announced today that American bombers in a series of attacks on Japanese warships and transports off the Netherlands Indies island of Bali shot down four Japanese planes and scored direct hits on three enemy cruisers and four transports.

Four American planes were lost, a communiqué said, detailing American participation in the continuing action which already had been partially reported from Batavia.

Meanwhile in the Philippines, there was heavy artillery firing in the Bataan peninsula and Japanese siege guns resumed fire on the Manila bay fortifications, concentrating on the exposed island outpost of Fort Frank.

Enemy planes made frequent flights over the Bataan lines, dropping incendiary bombs, the communiqué said.

At least ten heavy American bombers took part in the air and sea fighting off Bali, from which, the communiqué made clear, complete reports were still lacking.

SHIPS BADLY NEEDED
Meanwhile crated war materials were reported today to be piling up on American wharves awaiting urgently needed cargo ships to carry them to the Pacific war front.

And lack of sufficient shipping, rather than inadequate production, was described authoritatively as the most serious obstacle in the way of bolstering distant lines. However, there was a conviction in the Capital that shipping shipping would be only a temporary bottleneck.

A senate appropriations subcommittee was assured by Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson yesterday that manufacture of planes, tanks and guns was going forward rapidly. From Rear Admiral Emory S. Land, chairman of the Maritime Commission, members received a less encouraging description of the difficulties in turning out cargo vessels.

The committee is to act Monday on the $32,070,901,900 Army-Navy appropriations bill, carrying $3,852,000,000 in direct appropriations.

Missing Princeton Man Found Friday

The mysterious disappearance more than a year ago of Milford Obermeyer, 44, from his Princeton, Ill., home, leading officials to believe that he was dead, was cleared today by Peoria police.

Sheriff Clifford Thompson of Bureau county said last night that Obermeyer, who admitted his identity, offered no motive for his actions. The sheriff quoted him as saying, "I was disgusted and walked out on life." Police found him in a Peoria jewelry store where he had gone to make a purchase.

During the past 13 months said Obermeyer told him, he had used the name of "Elmer Layden" and had worked at Newton, Ia., and East Moline, Ill. He now is employed as a foreman in an East Moline dairy plant.

After Obermeyer's disappearance on New Year's Eve, 1940, police found his automobile near the Mississippi river at Muscatine, Ia., and expressed fear that he might be dead.

Court Is Asked to Order Amputation of Overgrown Arm

Seattle, Feb. 21.—(AP)—In the face of a mother's opposition, Washington's highest court must decide whether a judge can order the amputation of an 11-year-old girl's grossly distorted arm.

Patricia Hudson, born with her left arm disproportionately large, is the pawn in the tragedy that has aligned her mother against her four brothers and five sisters in the controversy.

The children first brought the case before Superior Judge William G. Long, in Juvenile Court here. Little Patricia, wearing a cape to shield her greatly overgrown member, supported their appeal for an amputation order, even in the face of what she knew was a grave risk.

Seattle doctors to whom Judge Long recently submitted the case expressed the fear that death would be almost certain within a few years if the arm were not amputated.

10 Times Weight of Other
After arguments yesterday, which showed the arm to be 10 times the weight of the other, the court assigned the case for a written opinion.

The mother, Mrs. Patricia Hudson, asked the Supreme court to prohibit a court order for an amputation, expressing fear that the operation would bring death. The father, Claude E. Hudson, 53, is an invalid.

"I'm afraid the operation will kill her," the mother explained. "But even if I knew that she would come through alive, I would still be against it, because I believe that there's a chance that some day medical science may find some way to cure her arm."

"She skates like other children and even sews."

The father indicated he did not share his wife's wholehearted opposition to the operation, but said he was "leaving it up to Mama."

"Flying Kernels" To Be Inducted Sunday

Moline, Ill., Feb. 21.—(AP)—Twenty-five picked men from eastern Iowa and western Illinois, who make up the aviation squadron known as the "Flying Kernels," will be inducted formally into the Naval Reserve here Sunday afternoon.

The squadron will start preliminary flight training at Glenview, Ill., training station in March.

Among those to be inducted is George "Sonny" Frank, Davenport, University of Minnesota All-American football player.

Governor George A. Wilson of Iowa will present the "Flying Kernel" wing insignia to Iowa members and Lieut. Gov. Hugh W. Cross of Illinois will perform the same service for the Illinois members of the squadron.

Lieut. P. S. Dalton, Jr., of the cadet selection board, will administer the service oath.

Army and navy officers will be among those attending the ceremonies, which will be preceded by a parade through the tri-cities.

Sacrifice

The destroyer and all but seven of her crew of more than 100 were lost. But the troopship, with her valuable cargo of airmen, each of whom had at least a year's flying in British and United States army schools and in Canada, sailed safely into a Scottish port.

First Allied Naval Offensive in Fight For Indies Raging

Damaging Blows Dealt Japanese Warships and Transports

By ROGER D. GREENE
Associated Press War Editor

United States and Dutch warships, aided by dive bombers and fighting planes, smashed back at Japan's invasion hordes in a flaming sea battle off the Island of Bali today, and by latest accounts had already blown up a Japanese cruiser and inflicted damaging blows on two other cruisers, two destroyers and four transports.

As the battle raged into its second day in the shark-infested Java Sea, dispatches from Batavia said it was potentially greater than the fight for Macassar Strait, the scene of Japan's worst naval disaster of the war.

United States cruisers and heavy bombers, combined with Dutch cruisers and destroyers under the aggressive command of the Dutch Vice-Admiral C. E. L. Helfrich, was reported blasting furiously at the invaders.

A war department bulletin, issued in Washington, said at least 10 heavy American bombers attacking the Japanese armada off Bali scored direct hits on three enemy cruisers and four transports, and also shot down four Japanese planes.

Four U. S. Planes Lost
Four American planes were acknowledged lost.

Batavia dispatches said the Java Sea fight was the first allied naval offensive in the critical battle for the Indies.

One allied destroyer was torpedoed and sunk.

A bulletin from United Nations headquarters in Java said the planes sank a large Japanese transport and scored a series of direct hits on enemy cruisers and destroyers.

"One of the cruisers, which received two direct hits of heavy bombs, was seen to be stationary and on fire," a communiqué said.

Dispatches from Batavia said the fighting began shortly after midnight yesterday in Lombok Strait, east of Bali, and continued on a major scale today as the struggle for the last United Nations stronghold in the Indies thundered toward a climax.

Allied submarines and treacherous coral reefs were reported playing havoc with Japanese landing forces.

Bali, already invested by Japan's sea-borne invasion hordes, lies across a mile-wide strait from Java.

A Dutch communiqué heard in Canberra, Australia, said that three Japanese cruisers, a destroyer and three transports had been damaged and another destroyer blown up in an attack off Bali. It did not specify whether this referred to the post-midnight action Friday or a later engagement.

Tokyo Claims Victory
Imperial Tokyo headquarters, giving its version, claimed a smashing victory against heavy odds in a battle after midnight Friday morning in the 15-mile-wide strait between Bali and Lombok islands.

A Japanese communiqué asserted that two Dutch destroyers were sunk and a third heavily damaged by two Japanese destroyers, which then chased two Dutch cruisers three miles before two more Japanese destroyers rushed up and helped score torpedo hits on the fleeing cruisers.

With the Far Pacific conflict surging ever closer to her shores, Australia ordered civilians to evacuate Darwin, twice-bombed naval base on the north coast of the commonwealth, and military authorities clamped strict control on the area.

Coast in Darkness
Authorities also ordered that no lights be shown at night in any building within 10 miles of the Victoria coast of southeast Australia, evidently fearing that the Japanese armies freed from the Malayan campaign might strike any moment.

Latest reports from Batavia said Dutch troops were still battling fiercely in defense of Bali and Sumatra but acknowledged that the situation was growing more critical.

Supported by American volunteer group fighters, RAF bombers and Hurricanes, British Imperial defenders were reported still holding their lines in Burma against increasing pressure.

"The enemy tried to cross the river near the mouth of the Irtis, but was repulsed."

AMERICAN designers look everywhere for wartime fashion freshness, and here's a striking example of starting with an old prairie schooner-going bonnet and coming up with Spring, 1942. CORP. BYLINOWSKI'S BRIDE RETURNS TO DIXON; HE SAILS FOR COAST ARTILLERY DUTY

After a brief honeymoon with her young corporal bridegroom on the post at Fort Hancock, that overlooks the New Jersey coastline, Mrs. Walter Bylinowski returned to the city last evening to resume her office duties at the Dixon State hospital and join the ever-lengthening parade of brides who are marshalling their courage for their part behind the lines, while their husbands depart for active duty. On Wednesday, the former Miss Phyllis Nadyne Wells saw her bridegroom off for an unrevealed destination overseas with Headquarters Battery, 61st Coast Artillery.

The young couple, who had originally planned a church wedding here in Dixon, found they were unable to cut the red tape governing the comings and goings of men in service in time for a Valentine's Day marriage, and so they were married Sunday morning, Feb. 15, before the altar of St. Patrick's church in Highlands, N. J., about eight miles from the post. The Rev. Father Neil Mooney performed the ceremony immediately following the 10 o'clock mass, and a number of friendly parishioners remained for the wedding and to wish the couple happiness.

Miss Joan Frey and John Pressor of Highlands attended the bridal pair. Afterward, the couple and their attendants made up a dinner foursome at Cedar Inn at Highlands.

Mrs. Bylinowski is the only daughter of Mrs. Winifred Wells of 514 East Third street. Before entering the United States army a year ago last November, Corporal Bylinowski was golf pro at the Oregon Country club. He is a son of the Stanley Bylinowskis, who reside east of Oregon, and before being transferred to the eastern post, in December, was stationed at Ft. Sheridan.

Mrs. Oscar Johnson, head psychologist at the Dixon State hospital, will address members of the Junior Woman's club at 7:30 o'clock Tuesday evening at the First Christian church.

Mrs. Charles Haenisch, public welfare chairman, is in charge of the program.

DINNER HOST

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. McMaster, their daughter, Mrs. W. K. Pottinger, Mrs. Frank Rosbrook, and Mrs. S. W. Lehman were recent dinner guests of F. X. Newcomer at his home, 224 East Third street.

Neat Trick

The look of fullness, where it isn't, distinguishes this new Charles Cooper dress of black crepe—and there's something to strive for in wartime goods-conserving clothes. The designer's skilled cutting and draping creates the soft effect that doubles for pleats or gathers. Rhinestone buttons outline the surplus line of the bodice and one side of the restrained, asymmetrical, figure-stating dinner gown.

TO BE NURSE

Miss Charlotte Palmer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hal Palmer of Mt. Morris, has entered the American School of Nursing in Chicago for a three-year training course. She was accompanied to Chicago by Mr. and Mrs. Ray Cain and Miss Leona Palmer, who motored on to Milwaukee to visit Miss Evonne Cain, who is studying child nursing in that city.

Nick Johnsons Have Anniversary

The Nick Johnsons of Ohio, Ill. were celebrating the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage on Sunday with a turkey dinner at their home. Afterward, open house was held for the couple at the home of their son, Everett Johnson.

Mrs. James Daven and Robert Johnson, who attended the couple at their wedding, half a century ago, were present, and photographs were taken of the bridal party.

Mr. and Mrs. Johnson were married at the Immaculate Conception church in Ohio, Feb. 17, 1892. For a number of years, they resided on their farm, east of Ohio, until retiring to their present home on South Main street, in Ohio.

The Johnsons have four children, Dr. R. N. Johnson of Sheffield, Mrs. Glen Piper of Princeton, Everett Johnson of Ohio, and Hugh Johnson of Chicago. There are also eight grandchildren.

Mr. and Mrs. H. U. Bailey of Princeton have returned from a visit in Miami Beach. They were registered at the Roney Plaza.

A Thought for Today

The Lord trieth the righteous; but the wicked and him that loveth violence his soul hateth.—Psalms 11:5.

For the Gods approve the depth, and not the tumult, of the soul.—Wordsworth.

We Must Take Up Our Burden

For a great nation and a powerful people, the United States is unique in its coy reluctance to assume leadership.

For years the United States has been pictured to the world as swaggering imperialism, with the flag waving and eagle screaming. It never was true. We took territory from Mexico and Spain, tried to pay for it, and have been apologizing for it ever since. Every Central American country in which we "imperialistically" intervened, is a free country today. Nicaragua was free. Cuba is free. The Philippines would have been free soon, and they shall yet be free.

That is not imperialism. On the other hand, we have always shrunk from influencing other countries, even from carrying our fair share of the load of world adjustments.

Now the world is in the course of a tremendous upheaval. New powers and forces are seeking to dominate it, displacing those which have dominated it in the past.

We still crouch back in our corner and ask in quivering voice, "Are we fighting to insure that the British Empire shall rule the world? Will Russia dominate the world?"

It is characteristically American to those who really know the Americans, that we never ask "How about us doing a little dominating ourselves?"

Are we nothing, then, we 133,000,000 Americans, who first flung the torch of liberty abroad in the world, and who have kept it burning for 150 years, building the while the goodliest way of living the world has ever seen? Are we nobody, that it is not asked abroad, "Is American free democracy going to dominate the world?"

Let us break the chains of this national inferiority complex. Let us cry to the world that we are free and democratic, and proud of it; that we believe it is the best way of life; that we believe others would be wise to follow it; that we propose to fight to preserve, and if necessary to extend it; that we look any post-war world squarely in the face, confident that what we have needs odds from nobody. Let us so make war that all Latin America will say, yes, totalitarianism was mighty, but free democracy was mightier still, let us cleave to it; so that China may see how to build herself in like manner; so that Russia will say, we may keep socialism, but we want a free and democratic regime with personal liberty; so that all peoples may say, the United States has GOT something there, let's go and do likewise.

Let us quit cringing and waiting; let us bear ourselves like free men, in such a way that the world may be aware of us.

ity complex. Let us cry to the world that we are free and democratic, and proud of it; that we believe it is the best way of life; that we believe others would be wise to follow it; that we propose to fight to preserve, and if necessary to extend it; that we look any post-war world squarely in the face, confident that what we have needs odds from nobody. Let us so make war that all Latin America will say, yes, totalitarianism was mighty, but free democracy was mightier still, let us cleave to it; so that China may see how to build herself in like manner; so that Russia will say, we may keep socialism, but we want a free and democratic regime with personal liberty; so that all peoples may say, the United States has GOT something there, let's go and do likewise.

Four "Musts" for War Time

This year's war budget alone, as proposed by the President, will be $56,000,000,000—more than half the estimated national income. That makes it mandatory that the Federal government and the people insist upon a workable fiscal policy which will make it possible to spend this money without bringing on an internal fiscal collapse.

First, all must pay higher direct and indirect taxes. And direct taxation must be extended to the very lowest income brackets.

Second, every non-essential, non-defense government activity must be stopped, and appropriations sharply reduced in many non-defense bureaus.

Third, the people must make every possible reduction in their living expenses, and buy Defense Bonds and Stamps to the limit of their abilities.

Fourth, the government must not loan or spend money for any purpose that can be financed by private business.

This last is extremely important. There are literally dozens of Federal loan agencies. Many of them operate in direct competition with the banks, thus subjecting the burdened taxpayers to needless expense and risk. The banks, as their spokesmen have said, are able to materially expand private and defense financing. They must be permitted and encouraged to do it.

The President's message on the State of the Union indicated the extent to which all must pull in their belts and help win this war for liberty and security. And government itself must do precisely the same thing.

Revolutionary Aftermath

When former President Arnulfo Arias arrived smirking and self-satisfied in his comfortable exile from the cares of administering Panama, many people wondered whether this was just another "palace revolution."

Much more than that apparently occurred. President de la Guardia has since the change more than justified it. He has not only co-operated wholeheartedly with the U. S. in the matter of Canal defense, which is worth many divisions, but has instituted a domestic program of reform and clean-up which has set price ceilings, shut down on rackets.

Thus a double purpose was served by the revolution, by whomsoever and however it was engineered. The United States has a better friend; Panama has a better President.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

(Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc., reproduction in whole or in part strictly prohibited.)

Washington, Feb. 20.—The mail of protests keeps coming from supposed "apathetic" citizens who resent the term and hold their accusers, the government officials, responsible for their condition. Many now ask what I think of the justice of their complaint, what is wrong and what should be done.

It seems to me the root cause for unsatisfactory public morale can be traced back beyond congressional pensions, fan dancers, suspected waste, mistakes of government, lack of aggressiveness, etc., to one big basic mistake. These valid matters are incidents seized upon by the confused and uninformed public to express its dissatisfaction.

The basic overall mistake of the government has been in letting the people become confused and uninformed. The public relations counselors of the government are, by and large, those who have gained experience in the previous new deal political campaigns. They are still hewing too closely to tactics that proved successful then.

For an over-simplified instance, if graft was charged against WPA, might have started a fight against "economic royalists" to remove the pressure and divert attention. Now that criticism is being made of certain government actions, they like to make-believe it is the work of some mysterious "Cliveden set" or enemies of the people in Washington who have misled the whole country with rumors.

The trouble is that, at the start of this war, the official line was to suppress military information (which ought to be suppressed) but at the same time to lead the people to believe everything was all right. The first MacLeish announcement, for instance, was a piece about how good our production was going. Navy Secretary Knox said something about us being able to fight in two oceans at once. The official tone was:

"We can lick the axis all right, just you don't ask any questions."

This left the people in a pretty high vacuum.

Then along comes MacArthur's entrapment, the loss of Singapore, the loss of aggressive action that the people could see and read about. The set-backs were really expected by those in authority. Anyone who has read this column knows that. But no official prepared the people for these shocks. In fact, no one in authority said much of anything about anything.

Naturally, people began asking questions and they found answers in what they could see, what they were permitted to see, such as the employment of a dancer friend of Mrs. Roosevelt in civilian defense.

Wars are always wasteful, inefficient and full of mistakes. In general, you will find back through history, that victory was decided—not so much by aggressive action—as by the making of fewer mistakes than the enemy.

But the government has been handling its public relations as if this were a political campaign in which it was afraid to confess a mistake—as if there were no mistakes.

In modern war, everyone is in the fighting zone, everyone is in the army. The bomber has brought the front to every fireside. Naturally, citizens who have become a part of war as never before, feel a keener interest than ever before in what is going on.

But the citizen cares less about a few mistakes than he does about winning the war. What he wants is to feel that he is a part of it, that he has been trusted to know the worst as well as the best. The old 1917 public relations ideas won't go.

Frankness is not easily achieved. The president cannot come right out and say he expects Singapore to go, for instance, although he can imply it, as Churchill did to this American congress. Roosevelt is a busy man, much too busy to make speeches or issue statements every day.

But the whole tone of his government would change, and the basis of its relationship with the public would be adjusted, in my opinion, if only his officials would stop trying to keep up public morale and devote themselves to saying what they really think, namely, that we can lose this war, that we are in for a long hard struggle.

They must let the people know they are not timid, not defensive-minded, but anxious to strike aggressively, the moment they feel able. They must let everyone know they are as energetic in ferreting out waste as in any other endeavor.

It is not a thing that can be done by a speech, but it could be done by a speech, plus action.

But there is something else. Those citizens who are carrying their criticism of government mistakes to the point of personal apathy (a "what's the use" kind of attitude) are only undermining their own welfare. Criticism is the duty of every citizen of democracy. It puts the leaders back on the track if they get off. It forces corrections.

But these officials here are elected leaders. A majority preferred them. The life of every individual is in their hands. The success that victory will bring or the fate of France in defeat, is theirs to work out.

It does not matter if you like them or dislike them. Your own self-interest demands that you give them your utmost support, even in your criticism.

Every American is an amateur statistic at heart. Many think they know how to win this war better than it is being won. They have the right, and the duty, to contribute their opinions, but in the end, it will be the official strategists here who must make the decisions.

State 4-H Clubs to Summon All Forces For Food Front

Illinois 4-H club girls this summer will concentrate on a new foods unit emphasizing use of farm-grown fruits and vegetables as a part of the state-wide food-for-victory program. Simultaneously 4-H boys of the state will do their share for all-out agricultural production through new projects on ton litters, victory gardens, milk production and poultry raising.

These are two ways in which the 36,000 4-H membership of the state will go to work on the seven-point national victory program, according to E. I. Pilchard and Miss Anna Searl, 4-H extension specialists, University of Illinois College of Agriculture.

The program calls for (1) interpreting to the community the four freedoms: freedom of speech, freedom of worship, freedom from want, and freedom from fear; (2) making every effort to produce and conserve needed foods in 4-H club projects; (3) saving for victory—prevention of waste, collecting scrap metal, burlap, old paper; (4) developing individual and community health; (5) learning useful technical and mechanical skills and cooperating with all defense agencies where help is needed; and (7) understanding the social and economic forces at work in this country through discussion groups and other organized community activities.

Through their foods work, 4-H girls will conduct a well-rounded campaign to plan, use and conserve all home-grown foods possible. Other projects, such as wise selection of clothing and proper use and care of garments will bear out the waste-prevention policy.

SERIAL STORY

KINGS ROW

BY HENRY BELLAMANN

THE STORY: Schoolmates in smalltown Kings Row are orphaned Parris Mitchell, desperately ill after overseas father of childhood sweetheart Renee heads her, while her away; "all boy" Drake McHugh (tomboy Randa Monaghan) beautiful Cassandra Tower whose doctor father, towns mystery, takes her out of school after social snub from Gordon's Louise Gordon, leading physician's daughter; half-wit Benny Singer, brunt of schoolboy jokes, whom lawyer Skelington saves from jail when Benny challenges attack from bully Fulmer Green and Renee. Madame von Ein, Parris' French grandmother whom he adores, plans for Parris' medical schooling in Vienna, knowing she cannot live long. Tom Carr, wife of insane Lucy Carr, suggests to Parris her treatment of mental ill. Parris is reading medicine with Dr. Tower.

NEW WORLD OPENS

CHAPTER X

HERE in his study, with the sunlight touching his heavy mahogany-colored hair, Dr. Tower looked younger than Parris had expected. Also he had an air that was not easy for Parris to define, but which he knew was unlike that of other men. Distinction, yes; but also something quietly and intensely alive, maybe a shade menacing.

"I hear your grandmother proposes sending you to Vienna."

"Yes, sir."

"She must be extraordinary."

"She's quite wonderful," Parris said quietly, and Dr. Tower nodded gravely. Then he began to talk. Parris could not follow all of it, but he listened as he had never listened before.

Parris felt enormously important as he listened. Dr. Tower had the air of taking him into a quite special confidence. Parris was giving his most concentrated attention now, but he was giving something else, too, and that was a sudden and violent loyalty.

Dr. Tower turned abruptly in his chair. "You aren't having psychology at Aberdeen, are you?"

cited than he had ever been in his life.

IN midwinter Drake's Uncle Rhodes died, and his aunt had a stroke shortly afterward. Plans were being made to close the house and to remove Mrs. Livingston to a sanitarium.

"What are you going to do?" Parris asked when Drake told him about it.

Drake looked a little forlorn under a thin bravado. "I guess they'll send me to live at Mrs. Searcy's boardinghouse."

"Parris couldn't think of anything to say."

"Say, Parris, you and I are mighty near in the same fix! Did you ever think of that?"

"How do you mean?"

"When your grandma dies you'll be all by yourself in the world, too."

Parris' head went down and he slid his hands deeper into his pockets.

Drake continued more cheerfully. "I'll have forty thousand dollars when I'm twenty-one."

"Will you, sure enough?"

"I guess you'll have more'n that, won't you, when your grandma dies?"

"I don't know. I never thought about it."

"Sure you will. I heard Uncle Rhodes say your place out there was worth a lot of money."

"How did you know about it?"

"Oh, I don't know. Everybody knows everything about everybody's business in this town."

"Well, I don't."

"You're a peculiar kind of a kid, anyhow, Parris."

"How, Drake? I wish you'd tell me."

"I don't know, just peculiar. I like you all right, though. You know that?" This was unusual from Drake.

"Soon's I get my money I think I'll buy an interest in something or other and work hard, and in a couple of years get married."

Parris was stunned for a moment. Getting married was something he never had thought about. He looked respectfully at Drake.

"Who? Cassie Tower?"

"Lord, no. Her old man won't let you get in a mile of her. I'll tell you, but keep this to yourself."

"Of course."

"Louise Gordon?"

"Oh."

"Don't you like her?"

"Why, of course, I guess I do. I don't know her any more. Ever since I dropped out of school I don't know many people."

"That's so, I guess. You do kind of live to yourself, don't you?"

"It isn't because I want to."

"You're a fool sometimes, kid. Don't miss all the good times. You go around with me, and I'll show you something. I want to try everything before I get married and settle down. Say, how about Cassie Tower? How did you happen to mention her a while ago?"

"I just happened to think of her."

"You go there all the time, don't you, to see her old man?"

"I never see her any more, though—just once in a while."

"You're a funny kid, Parris. Didn't you ever have a girl friend?"

Parris flushed. Renee . . .

A THICK scurry of gray-blue clouds was coming up, and a strong wind poured over the rim of the western rise toward the prairies.

A recollection shot through him like a physical pain. Renee, shabby and little, and something else that squeezed his chest at the thought of her.

He turned around and walked backward—a fine drive of sleet had begun and it stung his face like fire. . . she was somewhere—right now. She was talking, or helping her mother, or laughing—would she be laughing, maybe? Could she be somewhere laughing while he was thinking so hard about her, and remembering, and feeling so terrible? He tried hard to separate the many mental pictures of her—to see her as she stood in the moonlight that night of his birthday supper, and said: "I'd like to be your girl. I guess you're my sweetheart, too."

No—no—no: she wouldn't forget, she couldn't! Renee! What was he to do about it? He'd have to find her someday. And then—Drake's startling phrase crossed his mind. And then—why then, he might get married.

As he edged up the long slippery terrace steps he thought of Drake's disquieting remark: "You and I are mighty near in the same fix."

This solid house and these secure acres of ground—they could pass away and belong to someone else. Drake had so casually said: "When the place is sold." It would be his when his grandmother died. Maybe he'd just keep it and try to run it as she did. But then he wouldn't be able to be a doctor, and he had to be a doctor. She wanted him to be, and of course he would do as she wished.

"Geed!" he muttered. "I wonder what's going to become of me."

Amboy Upsets Polo Quintet

The Irish from Amboy got their dander up last night, invaded the Polo Marcos court and subjugated them by the count of 42 to 31. To make it a great day for the Irish, their Ponies set back the Marcos' Lites.

Amboy outscored her host in every frame by grabbing a quarter lead of 5 to 4 and a second frame margin of 7 to 6 which favored her at half-time 14 to 11. In the third the Irish continued their march and eked out a margin of 14 to 12 and then in the fourth played the Marcos completely off their feet by the count of 14 to 8 which put the Amboyites in the win 42 to 31.

Mason, Amboy forward, clicked the board 15 times to lead his mates to victory. Holby carried the scoring honors for Polo with

Dukes, Sterling and Princeton Tie For Conference Title

Dukes Lose Heart-Breaker to Tigers by Score of 44-42

Eight Fouls in the Fourth Quarter Are Too Costly

That which we didn't hope and that which we feared all sadly came true last night as our Dukes went down to Princeton and returned on the short end of a 44 to 42 score. This brings the North Central Conference title into a three way tie. Sterling beat DeKalb last night in order to keep her ratings intact so the league title is split between Dixon, Princeton and Sterling, each having lost two Conference games. Nevertheless, we do have another claim to Conference honors for the Dukes' Frosh-Soph team by beating Princeton also grabbed a hunk of the title in her division. She turned back the Tiger Ponies 27 to 16.

Brown, Tiger center, was the fellow we most feared and now our fears have materialized for that boy was very aggravating in the way his height kept rebounding controlling the ball on rebounds and he proceeded to yell his mates feed the little oval to Yates. Tiger forward, who chalked up 16 tallies to pace the Princeton victory. Brown, nevertheless, aided by adding 10 counts to his team's credit. In the closing minutes of play this Brown menace was eliminated via the four count but his team had enough advantage to hang on for the duration of the Dukes' threat.

Cy Shank, Duke pivot-man, played the bang-up game for the Dukes with his following-in, excellent floor play and his contribution of 14 points for the Duke ledger. It is needless to say that Dixon was in a slump for every boy on the outfit played his heart out and the only outstanding victory fault was the fact that they realized their closeness to an undisputed title and were nervous. Even in the closing seconds of the game the Dukes had opportunities on which to tie the game up but were just a bit over-zealous in timing their passes and the result was throwing the ball away.

Coach L. E. Sharpe's boys have come a long way this year in development for early in the season not a guy around the drag gave them a chance for any sort of honors; but, these kids started out with a bang, held a fast pace for being an inexperienced bunch and proved the fact that a fellow with the right attitude, a sense of cooperation and the will to do or die can really achieve something in this old game of basketball.

Our consolation now rests with the idea that the Dukes have a few exceptionally tough foes yet to face and that their possibilities for winning the regional tourney here look very promising.

The Dukes were outscored in the first quarter 13 to 11. Reynolds started the scoring with a field goal, Shank got three goals, Loftus one and VanMeter a charity toss for their total of eleven. Princeton outscored the Dukes in this frame by virtue of five free points and only four goals.

In the second quarter the Dukes outscored the Tigers on Leeper's one goal, and three charity points; Reynolds with one goal, Shank with one goal and one free point, and Loftus one goal. Princeton scored on four goals and two free tosses. This made the half-time score all tied up at 23 points each.

The third quarter gave the Tigers their advantage which was never again overtaken. They outscored the Dukes 14 to 10 in this frame. Dixon gained its points in this period by three goals and three free points; two of each by Leeper, one goal by Reynolds and a free one by Loftus. Princeton really broke through the Dukes' defense in this quarter by gaining her margin on seven field goals.

In the fourth canto the Dukes worked hard and were constantly at nervous pitch but they managed to get within one point of the Tigers and they outscored their hosts 10 to 7 with two free throws by Leeper, two baskets and one free toss by Shank, one goal by Loftus and one free shot by Knack. Princeton would have lost the game in this period if it hadn't have been for free throws, for she collected on the charity line five times and managed to get only one goal through the Dukes. The game ended favoring Princeton with the count of 44 to 42.

Dukes' Ponies Wade Thru Princeton to Share Conf. Title

The Dukes' minor team fared a mite better than her elder brothers as she polished off the Princeton Ponies 27 to 16. The little Dukes had their own way through-out the fray by taking an early game lead and building on it all the way. This victory gives the little Dukes a share in the North Central conference title for the freshman and sophomore division.

The Dukes got off to an early lead in the first quarter by chalk-ing up 8 tallies and holding her opponents to a goose-egg. In the second she came back stronger than ever with 11 counters but she allowed the Tigers for points.

In the third canto the Tigers performed the better as they outscored the Dukes 7 to 6. The Dukes decided to rest on her margin through the fourth period and managed to get only two points and the Tigers rolled up five. The game finished at 27 to 16 in favor of the Dukes.

Goff, Duke forward, displayed a brilliant brand of ball as he counted up four goals and four charity tosses for a total of 12 tallies and Cramer followed him with four goals and two free points for 10 counters. Eakle led the losers with 5 points.

New York, Feb. 21.—(Wide World)—The Bing Crosby-Bob Hope golf tour, which raised $10,000 in gate receipts for the P. G. A. war relief program and $40,000 on defense bond sales, will be repeated in the east in late April and early May . . . First score arm of the spring training season belongs to "Mike," the Reds' pitching robot. The machinery got twisted on the way to Tampa.

Shear Nonsense
Sam Otis of the Cleveland Plain Dealer claims that the Pirates' Johnny Goe owns the longest sore arm in baseball, both in years and inches. John stretches out 6 feet 9½ inches and hasn't been able to pitch in a year . . . Art Edson of the Oakland City Times described basketball Gerald Tucker as being "smooth as a pane of glass and polished as a dance floor" . . . Don Donaghy of the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin maintains that the Florida training camps aren't bombproof, but after the second week the young pitchers won't know the difference between a bombing and a rally.

Today's Guest Star
Jimmy Murphy, Canton (Ill.) Daily Ledger: "The Chicago Cubs' record book says of Lou Nivkoff: 'He plays a harmonica, sings a mean baritone and always furnishes a laugh or wisecrack when things are dull' . . . yeh, but his 'tenor' baselines failed to help the Cubs much last season."

Notes on Names
Popper Stopper, who used to be a pretty good heavyweight, works in a garage in Delaware county, Pa., looking after state cars and trucks. No doubt he specializes on brakes . . . Louis Teehee, an Oklahoma Indian, received a broken jaw in a Golden Gloves fight at Fort Worth, Tex., last week. Teehee didn't consider it a laughing matter . . . Lemuel Bumpers, Detroit Tigers' farmhand, enlisted recently in the Naval Air Corps. The other airmen hope there's nothing in names.

Cleaning The Cuff
"Ola" and "Sigurd," the Norwegian airmen who have been cleaning up the ski jumping meets, don't want to be called referees. They say they fought in Norway and are here just to get themselves equipped for more fighting . . . Sam Byrd, former Kankee outfielder who has become a top-ranking golf pro, recently received an offer to return to baseball . . . Dixon Cafe and The Reynolds Wire Hang Onto 1st and 2nd

Dixon Paint and Sunnysbrook Each Roll Three Straight

The Dixon Cafe bowlers had their first place in the Major League at the Dixon Recreation seriously threatened for a while last night. They dropped their first game to the Schlitz Beer team but managed to come back and win the next two which gave them their safe margin over the second place Reynolds team. Worley did the pace setting for the Cafe with a series of 559 and F. Smith fronted the losers with a 543.

The Reynolds Wire lads pushed hard against the Cafe team as they swamped the Freeman Shoes with three straight games. Ridlbauer was high scorer for Reynolds with 554 and L. Smith led the Freeman bowlers with 447.

The Dixon Paint crew completely shut out the Hunter Co. in three games. The Paint boys rang up the high team series for the night as they rolled a total of 2907. Not a one of the Paint members had a series under 500 which makes pretty much of an invincible combination. Daschbach rolled the high series for the night as he led the Paint team with 646. Nelson's 466 was the Hunter Co.'s best offering.

Not to be outdone when it comes to shut-outs the Sunnysbrook team waded through the Hub Tavern in three encounters. Dwyre rolled a 521 to lead the Sunnysbrook team and E. Klein was high for the losers with 484.

PHILIPPINES' QUISLING

By ERNESTO D. ILUSTRE

Nothing short of desperation—a desperation born out of either the natural or more probably assumed shyness of many genuine Filipino leaders to do their bidding could have compelled the Japanese to nominate old and senile warhorse, General Emilio Aguinaldo, as their "Quisling" in the Philippines.

For the invaders know only too well that Aguinaldo—like their first choices, Artemio Ricarte, the Filipino expatriate; Benigno Ramos, the Saldaña leader, and Pio Duran, an all-out pro-Japanese mouthpiece in Manila—is, and has been for several years, a political nonentity in the islands, whose voice and influence does not extend beyond the confines of his 10,000 wooden frame mansion at Kawit, Cavite not many miles from Manila.

Fortunately for him, and unfortunately for the Filipinos, other people, particularly Americans, seemed to overestimate Aguinaldo's political strength and hold on to his people; these Americans humored him, paid him homage, and tried every device to befriend him. Almost every Governor General from Taft to Murphy paid Aguinaldo courtesy calls as did other high ranking U. S. civil, Army and Navy officials.

All these efforts, judging from Aguinaldo's ready acceptance of Japanese offer, seemed to be of no avail. He remains to this day as implacable as ever, implacable in his hatred of everything American. It seems as if his surrender to General Funston still rankles in his heart, warping his soul so as to make of him a sad pathological case.

After he had sworn an oath of allegiance to the United States flag, the American government, like its people, imbued with the spirit of fair play and of letting bygones be bygones, did everything in its power to make things comfortable for the doughty Filipino war veteran. It even encouraged in some roundabout way his political ambitions; it even tolerated his vociferous pro-independence campaign. But, sad to state, the Filipino people would have none of him.

This is probably due to the fact that as a political leader Aguinaldo was and still is, to use an American expression, a flop. He was taciturn to a degree and at times choleric, and his voice had that pipe-squeak quality that fails to endear him with his audience.

But more probably the greatest obstacle to his political hopes was the fact that Filipinos could not, much as they tried, forget the crimes he committed during the revolution and during the wars against Spain and the United States. The responsibility for the murders of General Juan Luna, Andres Bonifacio and other Filipino leaders was laid at his door. To all these accusations he remained non-committal. His silence at this instance led Filipinos to believe, whether unwisely or not, in his guilt.

His people, too, has been none too ungenerous with Aguinaldo. At the instance of President Manuel L. Quezon, who has been his most bitter political opponent, the island legislature voted and appropriated him an annual pension, enough to support him and his family in style. Still, however, this gesture of his people seems unable to placate the old man from Kawit, whose sole claim to fame was that he led the revolt against Spain.

During the last presidential campaign, when he ran against Quezon, the Filipinos came to look upon Aguinaldo as an embittered old man who would do greater public service in being seen than heard—an old man with the proverbial characteristics of a totally spoiled child whose tantrums and whims had to be humored tolerantly and an old man whose whimpering had the same persistency as those coming from a paranoiac. The votes he garnered at the polls—aside from the votes which were cast for him just for the principle of opposing Quezon—can attest to his popularity and the extent of his following among the Filipino masses. It will be a great disservice to the best interests of both the American and Filipino people to put too much stress on the importance of Aguinaldo's political somersault. He, like other pro-Japanese Filipinos, is in the minority and can be considered lucky to command, if at all, 5 per cent of the total Filipino population.

The Filipinos are resolved in one thing: in the words of Resident Commissioner J. M. Elizalde, they are resolved "to prefer death to slavery."

Elizalde's aide, Abdon Lorente, aptly expressed the feelings of Filipinos in this country when he said: "Filipinos will fight side by side with the American boys until the Japanese vandals and their light-hearted cohorts are driven away from the Philippines."

Aguinaldo or no Aguinaldo, the Filipino people have already made their choice in this struggle and this is to continue to live the American way of living.

Three Way Contest is Certain in Republican Primary for School Job

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 21—(AP)—A three-way election contest between Wiley B. Garvin of Mascoutah, W. C. Handlin of Lincoln and Vernon L. Nickell of Champaign for the Republican nomination for State Superintendent of Public Instruction became certain today.

Garvin, the G. O. P. nominee for the post in 1938, and Handlin, superintendent of schools at Lincoln, were the latest to file nominating petitions to enter the April 14 primary. Nickell had filed petitions earlier.

76-Year-Old State Senator Up Once More For Office

Joliet, Ill.—(AP)—It is campaign time again for Richard J. Barr, 76 year old dean of the Illinois legislature. He has no intention of retiring after 40 consecutive years in the state senate.

The veteran Joliet Republican, who is completing his tenth four-year term, has served under nine governors and has long been recognized as one of the most influential men in Illinois politics.

There had been talk that "Dick" Barr this year might step aside for a younger man. It was only talk, however.

His eleventh term nominating petitions were filed with the Secretary of state, and so far the slender and soft-spoken senator has no opposition in sight for the April 14 primary.

Back in 1902, he was launched on his 40 year career without being consulted about it. He had been elected mayor of Joliet the year before and the Republican central committee, without Barr's knowledge, nominated him for the senate. He was elected.

This is Barr's story about how he, a farm boy who had worked his way through the University and law school, got into politics. At the start of his law practice in Joliet, Barr roomed on the east side next door to the home of Henry Cullom, who was postmaster, chairman of the Republican city committee, and father of two girls who were quite an attraction for the young barrister.

One evening Cullom noticed young Barr around the house, as usual, and a sudden thought entered his head.

"Dick," he said, "you are a Republican, aren't you?"

"I guess so, sir, if you say so," was the reply.

"Then, my friend," said Cullom, "consider yourself a candidate for city attorney. Our man has backed out at the last minute."

All the Republican candidates won in the city election that year 1897—except Richard J. Barr. Two years later, however, Barr ran again for city attorney, and this time he was the only Republican elected. His elections as mayor and senator followed.

In Joliet city politics, back in the days of adlerman factions and party lines, Barr got his first taste of political squabbles and connivance, which, he says, would make some present day metropolitan campaigns seem dull by comparison.

He held the offices of mayor and senator simultaneously. Some of his opponents said he had no right to hold the two posts at the same time. He doesn't know yet, he says, whether he had the legal right, but he kept the jobs.

The city council used to meet in Joliet on Monday nights, and when the state legislature was in session Barr had to catch a train out of here at 1:30 a. m. to be in Springfield at 10 o'clock on Tuesday mornings, getting what sleep he could in a railroad coach.

In his first year as mayor Barr launched a fight for "track elevation," and this issue defeated him for re-election in 1903. At that time five railroads had tracks running at grade through the city's business district, most of them through the courthouse square, and there were five stations in the city. The tracks were elevated, and the union station was built later.

"Politics is fun," says Senator Barr, "and I am enjoying every minute of my career. But public life is also a hard life, requiring real work, and I would like to give some advice to young men just starting out: Do your job well; be on the square with everybody; always keep your word; never let your head get swelled; and follow the rule I once heard, that if a man gets elected to an office of authority and abuses it, he loses it."

shuddered when the bombs exploded just astern.

A few minutes later two more planes came over at not more than 500 feet. This time they didn't miss. The decks seemed to bounce up to meet us as we flopped on our faces. I found a gaping hole through the forward hold.

Ship Listed, Settled Ten minutes later there was another ear-splitting crash followed by the hiss of escaping steam. The ship listed and began settling. The engineer emerged from the boiler room and assured us the boilers wouldn't explode because he'd opened the valves.

The officers gave no order to abandon ship but within 10 minutes a lifeboat was lowered. Before it hit the water, 15 sailors tumbled in and pulled off, too terrified to heed the officers' shouts to come back.

After looking over the damage, the captain ordered the other two lifeboats put overboard. We put Miss Lim, the only woman passenger, in one. The rest of us remained on board hoping that at least one of the leaky boats would be able to reach the nearest island five miles away, and return before we had to swim for it. The captain said he believed we might have another two hours but the fire in the coal bunker was spreading and the list was getting worse.

Propped against a coil of rope, I tried to continue my journal but was forced to drop the job twice to answer the call "all hands to fight fire" as just one of 44 men aboard the burning and fast settling ship.

We got the fires under control but Japanese planes came over again and again. One was so low I saw the bomb swing on the wing rack, but he didn't drop it. I helped hoist the life rafts overboard but the rotten bamboo lashings broke and the rusty tanks sank.

We were about ready to swim for it when one of our lifeboats returned. Thirty-six of us, including the captain and all but one officer climbed in. Six men volunteered to remain aboard for the next trip as our boat was leaking badly and we were crammed in like sardines. After an hour of bailing, rowing and sailing, we touched ground on a coral reef. We waded ashore on the little island of Bangka.

Fifty-five men and one plucky girl piled exhausted and soaked, with their legs bleeding from coral cuts, into a launch licensed to carry 15. Forty men gave up the struggle and turned back to wait with the small party left ashore until we could send help.

If the night on the island was miserable, the one aboard the launch was indescribable. Waves rolled over the deck where we were sprawled wet and shivering but we were still hoping we'd make Sumatra before dawn brought Japanese bombers.

Behind us chugged a smaller launch on which our skipper and doctor were working over the wounded men. Daybreak found us approaching the mouth of the river up which we worked until late afternoon. No one was quiet certain where we were except somewhere in Sumatra.

Late that afternoon we got a big thrill when, rounding a bend, we saw a white ensign over warships anchored at a wharf. Ashore we found members of the Malay command staff whom we'd last seen in Singapore three days before. They left ahead of us and got through unscathed.

Early the next morning, Feb. 16, we resumed our slow journey up-river. By noon we had reached the motor road head, hungry and cramped, but we were soon cheered by the warm hospitality of the Dutch military and civilians who fed us and provided us with a truck for the 400-mile drive across Sumatra.

Monkeys Howl Greetings Dawn found us on top a volcanic range which forms the backbone of Sumatra. Monkeys in nearby trees howled their morning hymn to the sun. One official en route tried to halt us for fear we'd break down and fall prey to tigers but only one black panther and one civet cat crossed the road and we didn't break down.

At mid-afternoon we reached northwest Sumatra. The hotels were full of refugees from Malaya and southern Sumatra, but a good Dutch lady took us in and gave us wholesome food.

Officials held little hope of our getting out, but the next morning the indefatigable public relations officer rushed in with the news that there was a slim chance of getting away by warship if we immediately pushed on.

No Taxi Available No taxi was available so we hired pony carts and drove to the railway station during a beating of tomtoms—which are used to sound air raid alarms.

Half an hour later we dismounted at the port. The effects of an earlier bombing were visible everywhere. Twice during the day an alert was sounded but no planes appeared. Later in the afternoon we saw the most beautiful sight I ever expect to see—a British destroyer hull down on the horizon steaming full speed toward the harbor.

Half an hour later, the destroyer was alongside. Officers quickly and efficiently shepherded us

Plant Breakdowns Slow Production of Much Material

Machinery Operation by Greenhorns Back of Much Trouble

New York—(Wide World)—You know what would happen to your car, don't you, if you took it out and drove it at 60 miles an hour, 24 hours a day?

Well the same thing is happening to much of the nation's industrial machinery. It is being pushed to the limit by inexperienced mechanics.

Anyone who has owned a second hand automobile formerly driven by a "cowboy" driver knows that machinery doesn't last forever.

Plant managers say the same thing is happening to machine tools in armament plants. In the furious drive to get planes, tanks and guns for fighting men, hundreds of thousands of industrial machines are being strained to the limit. Yet the same machines must be turning out goods six months from now and probably two or three years hence.

Machines that were built for the easy pace of eight hours a day are being made to run right around the clock.

Some intricate lathes, grinders and milling machines, formerly babied and coddled by expert machinists, are being put through their paces by complete greenhorns. Youngsters by the thousands have had to be rushed through skimpy training courses and pushed into the production line to fill the skyrocketing demand for machinists.

Doing Best They Can These youngsters are doing the best they can and plant managers say that, as a rule, they have filled the gap remarkably well but they still are far from expert mechanics.

Factory executives say this situation is making maintenance and repair costs rise sharply. Some production men frankly admit they just can't pay proper attention to maintenance.

As a result, machines in many plants are just being worked to the limit until they break down. Then repair crews rush in and put them together again and they go back on the job.

More important than rising repair costs, however, is the fact that every breakdown postpones the time when the fighting forces will get their necessary equipment.

Successful Schemes Production men have turned to any number of devices to plug this dangerous leak in production. Some more successful schemes to keep machines in operation and prevent breakdown delays are reported this month in Modern Industry, a trade publication.

aboard. There were allotted spaces for 176 men, women and children—British soldiers and sailors, American and Dutch men from Sumatran oil fields, rubber planters and six weary members of the last party from Singapore. The officers and men quickly made us at home and as comfortable as the cramped cabin and deck space on the destroyer would allow.

My pictures are probably spoiled, my camera is ruined and I have nothing but a filthy pair of pants, battered shoes and a borrowed shirt, but I am glad to be alive and looking forward to sleeping in a bed for the first time in 11 days.

actual offensive intentions against Russia this spring, but it is very hard to see how he can avoid throwing everything he has against the Russians, and at the earliest possible moment.

Evidence of continuing, enlarging U. S. and British aid to the U. S. S. R. increases Hitler's desperate urgency. Entrance into the Churchill war cabinet of Sir Stafford Cripps, Russia's best and wisest friend in England, is of far more importance in this connection than is generally realized. If proof of this is needed it may be found in the German propaganda broadcasts, which have almost hysterically denounced Cripps for weeks as "the man who would deliver up Europe to the bolsheviks."

There is yet another reason pushing Hitler into the eastern offensive and Sir Stafford put his finger on this, too, when he said recently that war between Russia and Japan was inevitable.

Vladivostok, in the words of the Chinese War Minister General Ho Ying-Chin, is the Achilles Heel of the whole Japanese armour of successes in the Pacific, a dagger pointed right at Japan's heart, and General Ho believes Japan will attack there in little more than a month.

When she does attack Japan wants Russia desperately engaged in the west. And Japan today is in an excellent position to insist that Germany strike the U. S. S. R. exactly when and how Japan desires it.

Steel Production Is 88,566,170 Tons

Shortage of Scrap at Some Mills Holding Down Full Output

New York—(Wide World)—Flashing flares of orange flame against the skies, the smell of molten metal and sweat and the clang of machinery at Pittsburgh, Youngstown, Chicago, Gary, Ind., and Birmingham, also gave telling evidence today that the steel industry was speeding war production.

Capacity of the industry, as the result of the building of new plants and installations of additional equipment, now stands at 88,566,170 tons of ingots annually, excluding crucible castings, revised figures by the American Iron & Steel Institute indicated this week.

This represents a gain in production capacity of 4,417,820 tons annually over the 84,148,350-ton capacity a year ago.

Steel mills, running full tilt, now can produce 1,698,822 tons of metal a week, contrasted with 1,613,892 tons a year ago.

Evidence that the industry is not letting many producing machines stand idle is shown in the current week's scheduled output of 1,634,100 tons, second largest for any week in history.

The current week's operations at 96.2 per cent of capacity compare with a revised 95.5 per cent rate last week.

Why, many people ask, aren't operations at 100 per cent of capacity if steel is so urgently needed to win the war?

Principal reason at the moment is shortages of scrap at some mills. Scrap metal and pig iron are mixed in the open hearth process of steel-making.

There is, the experts say, plenty of old iron and steel scrap in the country. Collections of the metal and deliveries of it at mill doors, however, are lagging in some localities.

As a result of the slow collections of scrap, steel executives say ingot production this year will not approach the 88,566,170-ton capacity figure.

Government officials estimate 1942 steel production will be around 82,000,000 tons.

Steel men are slightly more optimistic. They guess output for the full calendar year may be about 83,000,000 tons, equalling the 1941 production figure.

They say that new pig iron furnaces started twelve to eighteen months ago are coming into production and that expanded pig iron output is giving a brighter look to the raw materials picture.

Dundee Twp. Prepares For Civilian Defense

Chicago (AP)—If war comes to Dundee township, right in the middle of the prairies, the folks in Dundee township will be ready for it.

Every able-bodied man and woman has been asked to turn out this week and register for Civilian Defense. They've been asked to list their automobiles and trucks, too, and to remember to keep a bag of sand in the basement in case of fire.

Dundee township lies approximately 30 miles northwest of Chicago, covering a pleasant area of 45 square miles. It has a population of about 6,000, suburbanites, shop keepers and farmers, mostly, but all able and willing to take care of themselves.

The idea of the mass registration was sponsored by the township's three mayors, John M. Tallman of West Dundee, William Ortmann of East Dundee, and Henry J. Andersen of Carpentersville. They believe it's the first one of its kind in the country.

Without waiting for orders from Washington, the mayors and their men appointed 150 fire wardens and 50 police wardens to help existing authorities in an emergency.

Next, from house to house, they collected an arsenal of more than 50 rifles and shotguns, with enough ammunition to make them useful.

Then came the idea of the mass registration. Boy Scouts distributed handbills announcing the event, the American Legion and other civic organizations helped to arouse interest, and the registration will be held in Carpentersville Thursday, East Dundee Friday and West Dundee Saturday.

Residents will be asked to specify what volunteer services they believe they can undertake most efficiently. Those who wish may enroll in Red Cross classes in First Aid and other subjects.

IDEA WAS 'IMPRACICAL'
Before the days of his steamship invention, Robert Fulton experimented on submarine torpedo boats, but no government was interested in the "impractical idea".

Four Negro Children Die in Chicago Fire

Chicago, Feb. 21—(AP)—Four Negro children, all members of the same family, burned to death today when a fire attacked the upper floor of a three-story apartment building on the south side. Six other Negroes escaped with burns of varying degrees of seriousness.

The four children of Mr. and Mrs. Leo Johnson were asleep in a combination bedroom and kitchen in a third floor apartment when the fire broke out. The dead were Leo, Jr., 8; Norman, 6; Jean Vivian, 5; and Joan, 3. The father escaped while the mother was not at home. The building, made up into 18 apartments, housed 60 persons.

AUTOMOTIVE HINT

Stationery for Soldiers at Camp Grant Provided

Camp Grant—(Special)—So the "folks back home" may be informed on the progress of their sons in the Army at Camp Grant, the Camp and Hospital Service Council of the American Red Cross recently purchased 50,000 envelopes and 100,000 notecards for the use of the soldiers.

The stationery was turned over to Major Frank A. Bush, Special Services Officer, who placed it in the Post's Service Club, where it is given to soldiers by the hostesses upon request.

Brig. General John M. Willis, Camp Commander, in a recent letter to Willard L. Held, Field Director, thanked the Council for the contribution and complimented the members on the initiation of the new service.

Although this was the first time that the Red Cross had provided writing materials for able-bodied soldiers at Camp Grant, in the past it had been a practice to supply stationery for use by patients in the Station Hospital.

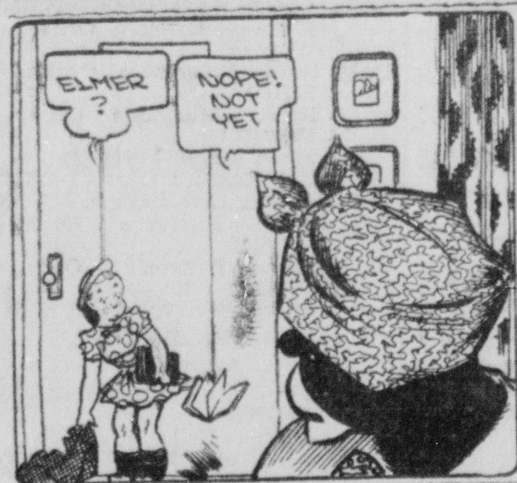

The Camp and Hospital Service Council is composed of representatives from the following Red Cross chapters in Illinois: Win-ago, Stephenson, Boone, Lee, Ogle, DeKalb and Whiteside counties. Also Beloit chapter and Rock County chapter in Wisconsin. Mrs. Edward Hinchliff of the Winnebago County chapter is Council Chairman.

This organization was established several months ago to provide a channel through which a concentrated effort to carry on work at Camp Grant would be most beneficial to the men in the armed forces. Josephine Nichols and Mrs. H. U. Bardwell of Dixon are the Lee County chapter's representatives on this Council.

GALLANT KNIGHTS
On a strip of land that they call Luzon
After our battle fleet had gone
With no one to aid that gallant band
But God above, in their final stand.

Let dreamers dream of an ancient lore
Of gallant King Arthur, long before,
But let us now right loudly sing
Of Mighty MacArthur, crown him King.

Imprisoned there on sad Luzon
With every hope of succor gone
And yet to fight for liberty
And die that others may be free.
Democracy what can it mean

The white, the black, the Philippine, Standing soldiers side by side Defending their flag with manly pride.

For shame to those who dare define And draw the brutal color line For every one of our gallant dead Has this in common, their blood is red.

Each defender brave and strong Is singing alike, the freedom song No questions asked of color or creed Who prove their worth by gallant deed.

So here again is a table round And here again are brave knights found And the grand old fort of Corregidor Is the magic sword excalibur.

We heard of gallant knights of old And of King Arthur brave and bold And so have sighed and wished that they Might have also lived in that gallant-day.

But all of the stories ever told Of gallant knights so brave and bold Are dimmed and palled by the gallant stand Of our own MacArthur and his band.

I wonder if there on Luzon's hill They ever think of our Lend-Lease Bill Of our aid to others, themselves denied For what could they do if but supplied.

So hail, to MacArthur, let us sing To our modern knights and their modern king But let us see that their blood and pain Shall not have been given in vain.

A Dixonite.

OUR PIONEERS

'Twas a dozen years or more ago, I'll safely say,
On a lovely afternoon in the early month of May.

A friend and I were roaming, in search of we knew not what, When suddenly we came upon an old settlers' burial plot.

Most marble slabs had fallen a long time in the past,
Others leaned wearily, holding on to the last.

As the ones who slept beneath had done, as told by day and date,
Nearly each one interned therein were ninety years or more I state.

When called to meet his Maker, and loved ones gone before
Who walk that golden strand on a far off distant shore;

At this period of time, had now passed fully eighty years
Since these settlers were buried mid sighs, heartaches and tears.

Counting time they had been born long ere Lincoln's natal day,
Why some had almost lived to hear what others paused to say.

About the death of Washington, and how they missed that man
When advice was needed badly as today we need a hand

And head as his to guide us sanely, safely through

Fathers' and Sons' Banquet

The twenty-first annual fathers' and sons' banquet was held Tuesday evening in the Kersten gymnasium. Over 200 were present. The banquet was served by the Woman's club members. Eight tables were beautifully decorated with patriotic decorations. Red candles were at each end of the tables, and streamers of red and blue were in the middle of the table. The centerpiece on each table was a large United States map with the name of "Our Soldier Boys" and the state they were in at each end of the maps were flags. The favors were small flags in marshmallows. The menu was baked ham, white potatoes, peas and carrots, perfection salad, pie, coffee, bread, pickles and jelly to which the men folks did justice. The Rev. S. L. Cover of the Brethren church offered the invocation. Arthur Watson who was chairman and toastmaster for the first time, did a splendid job, and was highly commended. The Rev. Carl Montanus of the Presbyterian church gave the toast to the boys which was responded to by Ivan Hullah. George Butterfield of the State Normal at DeKalb gave a motion picture lecture, "Sun Valley and Chicago Bears." The entire group sang for a closing song "God Bless America", after which the Rev. T. B. Reeves of the Methodist church pronounced the benediction.

During the business meeting the following officers were elected for next year: Chairman, Arthur Watson; vice chairman, Charles E. Baker; secretary, Walter Heckman; treasurer, Virgil Page.

Basketball This Week!

There is going to be an invasion Saturday night, Feb. 21. Ashton is coming over. You know those Ashton fans. They start coming at 5:00 so that the whole town will have a chance to sit down. Don't be left out in the cold, Franklin fans. A greatly improved team is going to play at 7:15. They started to go places up at Leaf River last Saturday. You'll be surprised when you see the basketball that they can play.

It has been a long time since the first Ashton-Franklin game of the season. Franklin's team has put a goodly number of balls through the basket since the first meeting and intends to keep right on. And anyway, you know what kind of games result from a meeting of Franklin and Ashton. Saturday's game will give you an idea of what to expect of the "Wildcats" during next week's tournament. (Let's make it a date Saturday at 7:15.)

Suffered a Stroke

Friends will regret to learn that Harry Stultz suffered a light stroke Monday morning. Both Mr. and Mrs. Stultz have been confined to the home and bed nearly all winter. Friends and relatives are hoping with them when spring comes that they may be able to be around and out of doors.

Hughes to Keep Office Open Monday, Holiday, to Receive Petitions

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 21—(AP)—Although most public offices will be closed Monday because of Washington's Birthday holiday, Secretary of State Edward J. Hughes will keep his office open to receive nominating petitions for the April 14 primary before the deadline at midnight Monday. The attorney general's office has advised county clerks informally to follow the secretary of state's decision to receive nominating petitions for county offices despite the holiday.

The statute limits filing of nominating petitions to not more than 66 days and not less than 33 days before the primary. The 50th Congress falls on Monday.
